

AN AUDIENCE OF LUNATICS.
Blackwell's Island's Demented Women Listening to Song and Recitations.
From the New York Star.

The monotonous repetition of asylums life was pleasantly tempered yesterday by an entertainment given by "The Criterion," a musical and literary society to the female lunatics confined on Blackwell's island. Many ladies and gentlemen from this city enjoyed this entertainment—to them so novel in its character—upon the invitation of Commissioner Brennan, under whose direction the pleasant exercises took place. The entertainment was given in Amusement ball, a long wooden building, consisting of one large room, with a well appointed stage. Pictures of prominent actors and actresses adorn the walls.

At 2:30 o'clock the lunatics, young, pretty, gray and old, were seated in the long room, the building and were quietly seated. Dr. Justin J. Sprague explained the nature of the entertainment, and then the curtain was rung up. A duet by Miss Dykeman and Mr. Humphries was loudly applauded, as was the piano solo by Miss Florence Clinton; but when Miss Maude M. Goodale humorously told of the woes of "The boy who swallowed a mule," the merriment of the audience was great, but not boisterous. Mr. M. P. Wilder gave some humorous selections, and Mrs. Bertha Currier recited "The March to Moscow." The feelings of the old and young were so excited by the reading of Mrs. Currier that she could not keep her seat half a minute at a time. Up she would jump, mutter inaudibly and then drop back into her seat only to repeat the operation an instant later.

Mr. Humphries sang, "We Met by the Riverside," and being encored, sang "The Dear Little Shamrock," which took the fancy of his hearers immensely, and all over the room were heard the ejaculation; "God bless us; God bless us." Banjo varieties by Mr. Gardner A. Reckard closed the entertainment, and it seemed to be only with regret that the audience could not remain longer and that red-worsted bonnets and were marched back to the asylum, their same visitors being requested to remain till the patients had departed. During the entire entertainment the deportment of the audience was excellent.

He Had Two Balls in His Stomach.

He put them there because it was the fashion at his boarding house. They were codfish balls. But the boarders found that putting too many codfish balls in their stomachs produced dyspepsia, especially when washed down with salt mackerel and tough steak. Had they not found that PERRY DAVIS'S PAIN KILLER cured dyspepsia, their boarding house fare would have killed them.

MISREPRESENTATION.

Fair competition is respected by all honorable business men. Seldom do we find a company of men professing to be honorable, resorting to the misrepresentation of another's productions in order to increase the consumption of their own. The advertisements published, under-taking Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder, are absolutely false, and the parties publishing them know it to be so. The repeated analysis by many eminent chemists throughout the country, show the superiority of DR. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER.

No Ammonia, nor Alum, nor Tartaric Acid is used in it. It is one of the oldest and most generally used Baking Powders in the market, and its healthfulness and effectiveness have been tested in a million homes, by the consumer's only reliable tests, THE TEST OF THE OVEN and years of daily use. It is to-day, as it always has been, the MOST HEALTHFUL, PERFECT FRUIT ACID BAKING POWDER.

INDICATIONS for the South Atlantic states, slightly warmer, fair weather, southerly to westerly winds, stationary or lower barometer.

A COUPLE of escaped convicts are making it lively for some frontier Arkansans, who have organized a party to run the villains down.

In another column is told, in a very interesting way, the story as to how a cow may be fed. Now that the town cow has to luxuriate within an enclosure, lucerne may be found an acceptable companion.

It is no unusual thing for interested Indian agents to get up reports of breaks from the reservations in order to gain cover for agitation in which their own irregularities may be hidden. One such report has been clumsily laid before the authorities at Washington, which is pronounced with credit.

The delayed picnic is at last in full bloom. The hived-up inmates of tall city houses sigh for a whiff of pure air as it blows over hill and vale, and gleefully seek the scene where for a while all thought of the morrow may be thrown away. And then they return home to pursue the humdrum of another year.

THE CIVIL SERVICE RULES.

The civil service rules, as prepared by the commissioners, have been made public, not by the desire of the commission, but by the activity of a correspondent of the New York Times. These rules are now in the hands of the president, and it is generally supposed that they will be approved by him as they stand. The first and second rules are taken from the statute. They provide that no person in the service shall use his official authority or influence to coerce the political action of any person or body or to interfere with any election; and that no person in the service shall be under any obligation to contribute to any political fund or to render any political service, and he will not be removed or otherwise prejudiced for refusing to do so.

Three classes of officers come under the rules—"the classified service at Washington," "the classified customs service," and "the classified postal service." The second class embraces eleven custom houses and the third class includes twenty-three postoffices. Rule 6 provides for open competitive examinations, competitive in their character, and relating as far as practicable, to those matters calculated to test the fitness of applicants for the particular places sought, and there are to be suitable competitive examinations to test the fitness of officials for promotion in the service.

Under rule 7, applicants are to be examined in penmanship, copying and letter-writing; in the fundamental rules of arithmetic; in the elements of bookkeeping and of accounts; in the elements of the English language, especially orthography and the proper construction of sentences, and in elements of geography, history, and the government of the United States. Special examinations may be made of applicants for positions requiring peculiar qualifications.

Rule 8 provides that no question in any examination or proceeding under the commission shall call for the expression or disclosure of any political or religious opinion or affiliation, and no discrimination is to be made on account of such political or religious opinion or affiliation. Applications for office are to be made on blanks in a form approved by the commission. Requests for such blanks and applications for examination, for the classified service in any department in Washington, to the United States civil service commission, Washington, D. C.; if for the classified postal service, to the postmaster under whom service is sought; if for the classified custom service, to the head of either customs office in the customs district in which service is sought.

Each application, in order to entitle the applicant to appear for examination, must state under oath the facts in regard to his name, residence and postoffice address; his citizenship, age, place of birth, moral character, health and capacity for the public service; his right of preference by reason of military or naval service, previous employment and residence for the past five years; his education, together with such other facts as the commission may reasonably require as showing fitness for the public service. The applicant must also affirm his qualifications under the clause of the civil service act which excludes those who habitually use intoxicating beverages to excess.

Every regular application must be supported by proper certificates of good moral character, health, physical and mental capacity for doing the public work; and the form and number of the certificates are to be regulated by the commission. Those under 16 and over 35 are not entitled to be examined for the classified postal service, or for the classified customs service, or the classified service at Washington, if under 18 or over 45 years of age.

names a selection will be made for the vacancy.

The appointments are to be made for a probationary period of three months, and if, at the end of that time, the conduct and capacity of the person appointed have been found satisfactory, he shall be absolutely appointed, otherwise he shall be deemed out of the service. Rule 21 announces that the civil service commission will "make appropriate regulations for carrying those rules into effect."

We have given the gist of the rules, and rule 21 is as a commentary and criticism upon the whole affair as could possibly be made. When the president passes upon and approves these rules, why should they not go into effect without more ado? If they do not effect the ends they aim at, at what possible "regulation" can carry them into effect? The truth is, the attempt to enforce civil service reform under a republican administration is, in the very nature of things, a farce and a fraud, and the civil service commission, with all its rules and attendant regulations, will be cast aside and forgotten by the machine republicans before the campaign of 1884 is fairly begun.

We give the commissioners credit for honesty of purpose and purity of motives, but if they were twice honest and twice as pure, they would fail to inaugurate civil service reform under a republican administration. Mr. Hayes and Mr. Carl Schurz made an effort in this direction. It cannot be said that their effort was a feeble one, for they were far more powerful than the civil service commission ever will be. Their feebleness was relative merely. The republican machine rolled over them and their attempt at civil service reform was as though it had never been. How can the civil service commission hope to do better?

In point of fact, it does not hope to do better—it does not hope to do as well. What are the penalties for the violation of the rules of the commission? The violation of these rules by any officer in the executive civil service "shall be good cause for removal."

This is the vague, indeterminate punishment that will purify a corrupt party and reform the civil service! It is too absurd. Suppose that a partisan president closes his eyes to the violations, as he undoubtedly will, what then?

Rules one and two are inoperative. The purposes of such knaves as Hubbell and Chandler, and Dorsey can be carried out in spite of them, and the office-holders have no remedy. Mr. Hayes issued an order prohibiting all assessments for political purposes, but the assessing went on, and the government employees knew they would lose their places if they refused to contribute a part of their hard-earned salaries to the cause of corruption. Assessments will be just as lively under Mr. Dorman B. Eaton's civil service commission as they ever have been.

IRON-MAKING IN THE SOUTH. Prof. McCrae, who is the chemist of the state geological survey of Pennsylvania, is certainly a competent witness, with no bias in favor of southern furnaces. He has been investigating iron-making in Virginia, and he furnishes these figures of the cost of making coke iron in two Virginia furnaces:

YESTERDAY Governor Boynton issued to the State university the ninth bond issued to that institution, under the law which makes provision for refunding the securities that the University may come into possession of. The bond was for one million dollars and will mature in twenty-five years. The total amount now held by the University is $65,000 issued as follows: six were issued July 10th, 1882, for $100 each by Governor Colquitt, one $100,000 by the State of Georgia, $1,000 by the State of Florida, $1,000 by the State of New York, and the ninth bond was issued on the 13th of April for $50,000. That was the Brown bond and the ninth was the bond issued yesterday. Major Cobb, the secretary of the board says there will be another large batch next year.

DURING yesterday morning an occasional toll of the second Baptist church bell would attract the attention of all. At first it was thought of it, but as the tolling continued for several hours the attention of the neighbors was attracted, and finally the attention of the police was called to the strange proceedings. A key to the church was not to be found, and the door opened. At first no one was to be seen, but on going up into the gallery some one was seen to get into a closet trying to conceal himself. The closet was open, and the eight-year-old boy named Johnnie Barron was found. He had hardly left at first when he came to be in the church, but after some time revealed the fact that he had attended the service Saturday night and fell asleep and woke up next morning and changed his clothes. The little fellow was taken out and told to go home. The boy on Washington street.

A DELIGHTFUL audience, composed of a number of Atlanta's lovers of music, were entertained yesterday afternoon at the Atlanta Female Institute by a musical recital given by Mr. Baril, assisted by Mrs. Baril, Miss Mollie Courtney, Miss Sue Moore, Miss Mary Franklin, with a well-digested, interesting and compressed biographical sketch of the great composer, Mendelssohn, by Miss May Field, the programme was made up of numbers from this great musician's works.
